

Prosecutors drop charges for remaining officers involved in the death of Freddie Gray

Baltimore City State's Attorney Marilyn Mosby dropped the charges for the three remaining Baltimore City police officers involved in the death of Freddie Gray, Wednesday.

Baltimore City police officers Garrett Miller, Alicia White and William Porter were the last three officers to go to trial. Miller was the next scheduled officer to be tried in death of Freddie Gray, who was fatally injured in police custody in April 2015.

Freddie Gray case: Judge to hold hearing ahead of trial of Officer Miller

Baltimore Police Officer Garrett Miller was compelled against his will to testify in the trial of Officer Edward Nero under a limited form of immunity that prevents prosecutors from using anything he said on the stand against him at his own trial. Before Miller's trial can begin Wednesday, Baltimore Circuit Judge Barry G.

BALTIMORE (AP) State's Attorney Marilyn Mosby defends prosecution of officers in Freddie Gray case, blames police for black man's death. Prosecutor says 'we do not believe that Freddie Gray killed himself,' stands by finding that his death was a homicide. Father of Freddie Gray says family stands behind Baltimore prosecutor and 'is proud to have her represent us'
